Partner

Michael Brooks has been a Partner at Fusion Logistics, Inc. since 2012 and has been on Fusion's Strategic Planning team since the company's launch in 2011.

Prior to working with Fusion, Michael lead a group of executives in 2006 that merged two public transportations companies, CD&L, Inc & Velocity Express. The result of the merger created the largest same-day transportation company in the industry at that time.

In 1995, Michael helped launch Consolidated Delivery and Logistics, Inc., a publicly traded company focused on same-day transportation. The company soon became CD&L, Inc. where he served as its group president and a member of the board of directors.

During his tenure at CD&L, Michael doubled the company's revenue and EBITDA growth while making over 30 acquisitions across the U.S.

Company revenues exceed $300 million, with over 5,000 independent contract drivers and 2,500 employees.

Prior to the consolidation, Michael owned and operated Harper's Delivery in South Florida, later acquiring Package Distribution Services, which he re-branded, Silver Star Express.

Silver Star grew into a multi-state package delivery companies from 1978-1995. His companies were consistently among the country's leading providers of niche parcel and package distribution services and was recognized three years in a row by Inc. Magazine as being among the country's 50 fastest growing businesses. Silver Star Express was a founding company of CD&L, Inc.

Michael has done high-level consulting work for both transportation, as well as for specialized business services companies.
